DETAILED ACTION

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 08 April 2010 has been entered.
2. The rejection using Isakson et al. given in section 4 of the detailed portion of the office action mailed 08 January 2010 is withdrawn in view of applicant's claim amendments and arguments filed 08 April 2010. A modified grounds of rejection is given below.
3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
4. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lin (WO 01/92000 A1)) in view of Dyke (U.S. 4,515,841).

Lin teaches a heat sealable packaging film that can have a polyester substrate with venting holes and a sealing layer over the entire surface of the film that covers the vent holes. The sealing layer melts in response to heat and pressure from micro wave cooking or sterilization (abstract, Figure 4, page 5, lines 10-25, page 14, lines 5-20, page 15, lines 20-30). Though Lin teaches starch as an ingredient of the sealing layer (page 11, line 11), the reference fails to explicitly teach use of a water soluble sealing layer. Dyke teaches the use of either a polymer that softens when it is heated or a water soluble polymer such as polyvinyl alcohol that absorbs steam and expands and dissolves to form an opening when a water containing substance is heated in a package (abstract). The instant invention claims a water soluble barrier layer over an opening in a thermal sealed package with a vent hole that is covered by a barrier of a water soluble material that extends across the entire surface of the substrate film with the vent opening. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have used a water soluble instead of a heat sensitive barrier layer in Lin because Dyke teaches these as alternate substitutes in the bag venting art when the contents of the package or the environment in which it is processed contain water. Variation in the thickness of the soluble layer and variation in the selection of bag substrate and soluble barrier materials is taken as being within the ordinary skill of the art depending on the strength of the seal desired and the desired opening temperatures and pressures, absent unexpected results.

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-20 filed 8 April 2010 have been considered but are moot in view of the modified grounds of rejection which addresses the water soluble layer extending across the entire surface of the substrate film.
